A new project, in collaboration with Dartmouth University in the USA, deals with the development of a miniaturized magnetic resonance sensor for measuring oxygen in tissue. The project combines mechanical, magnetic and electromagnetic design of the sensor, building the sensor and testing it in a tissue simulator and animals.

The project is suitable for graduate research.
For details, Aharon Blank, ab359@technion.ac.il